

Commission on Human Rights & Opportunities

Civil Rights is Good for Business Panel Discussion

Promoting diversity and inclusivity at work is not just the right thing to do, it is the profitable thing. Study after study shows that a diverse workforce with employees of all different races, genders, socio-economic and geographic backgrounds leads to greater productivity and creativity. As a result, companies, law firms, and organizations are pursuing strategies to make their workplace more diverse and free of discrimination. Join us for a discussion of why civil rights is good for business.

Moy Ogilvie, McCarter English

Deb McKenna, Hayber Law Firm

Liz Acee, LeClair Ryan

Don Shubert, CCIA Contractors

Kimberly Jacobsen, CHRO Human Rights Atty. III
Moderator

Date: Tuesday, October 23, 2018

Time: 1:00 — 3:00

Location: Room 2E of the Legislative Office Building
300 Capitol Ave, Hartford, CT 06106